

David Eggleton, CCS Secretary, Professor Kevin Morgan Cardiff University, architect Robert Sakula and CCS executive member Elaine Davey at Public Places, Civic Society event, Chapter Arts, Cardiff

Thank you for considering joining.

Cardiff Civic Society is a registered charity, and relies entirely on public donations to carry out its valuable work. Our aim at the society is to protect Cardiff's built and natural environment to create a better Cardiff for current and future generations.

We provide an independent voice for the city, free of political influence.

Cardiff Civic Society is also playing an important role in helping to shape the Local Development Plan (LDP), the document that will dictate how Cardiff develops over the next quarter of a century.

Where necessary, we also challenge local authorities on planning issues, for example, where developments are unsympathetic to their location or will have a negative impact on the communities who live near them.

We are also happy to play a part in helping communities improve their immediate environment.

If you can, please join today.

Joining, helping, donating

As a charity, we have no staff and no formal income, and rely totally on the goodwill of volunteers to carry out our activities.

If you feel you can contribute, even in a small way, please get in touch.

We need people to help us out with membership, event organisation, scrutinising planning applications, and so much more.
